

Mounds

These two mounds look very similar. They were formed in very similar ways, but by very different mechanisms.

This anthill was formed by ants bringing up grains of sand from under the ground and depositing them in an ever growing mound.

This “water anthill” was formed by water bringing up grains of sand from under the ground and depositing them in an ever growing mound.